Eyes of the stone thief

Photo Courtesy: ProfessionalStudioImages/E+/Getty Images Eye infections can happen for a number of reasons, including wearing dirty contact lenses, touching your eyes with unclean hands or even having certain medical conditons. Sometimes, you might mistake an eye infection for an allergy or cold because the symptoms can be similar. If you’ve experienced some changes to your eyes, read on to find out if they could be the signs of an eye infection.Swollen EyelidsSwollen eyelids may be a sign of general eye problems, but they’re often signs of eye infections specifically if they’re painful. Painful swollen eyelids can be a symptom of bacterial or fungal infections from unclean contact lenses. If you experience painful swollen eyelids, avoid rubbing or touching them. This can transfer bacteria to your eye, which can make the symptoms of an eye infection worse.Eye DischargeEye discharge is a telltale sign that bacteria are in your eye. One of the more severe symptoms of eye infections is waking up with discharge in the corner of your eye or having crusty eyelids. You can use a warm washcloth to free the crusts and help your eyes open.Blurred VisionBlurred vision may also be a sign of an eye infection. If left untreated, eye infections can lead to a loss of vision. So, if you notice it becoming harder and harder to see, it’s time to seek medical attention for your eyes.Persistent ItchingEyes that itch are a typical sign of allergies. This is one of the reasons why it’s so easy to mistake an eye infection for irritation that happens due to allergies. When you have an eye infection, the contact between the bacteria in your eye and your eye itself may cause itchiness. It’s best to refrain from scratching your eyes because that can transfer more bacteria to them. Instead, try an over-the-counter antihistamine, which will relieve the itching until you can visit a doctor.RednessRedness is a typical symptom of many eye conditions, including tiredness, allergies and infections. The irritation of the blood vessels on the surface of your eye may cause red eyes. This symptom is common among contact-wearers who often don’t clean their lenses, which is one of the leading causes of an eye infection.Watery EyesWatery eyes or increased tearing is another sign of an eye infection that people often mistake for allergies. Clogged tear ducts may cause watery eyes. Don’t wipe those tears from your eyes with your finger, though; it’s best to do so with a tissue so you don’t exacerbate the infection. Antibiotics can quickly stop this symptom in both adults and children.Light SensitivityInflammation or irritation from an eye infection may cause light sensitivity. If you’re experiencing light sensitivity, you may want to reduce the amount of light that hits your eyes.Flaking EyelidsThis symptom is also known as granulated eyelids and indicates blepharitis, a type of eye infection caused by bacterial or skin conditions. Sometimes lack of hygiene may cause blepharitis, but allergies or oily eye glands can also lead to it. You can use a topical cream, medicine or antibiotics to treat this type of infection.Blocked Tear DuctChronic eye infections can cause your tear ducts to become clogged or blocked. Blocked tear ducts, in turn, can cause eye infections because the tears aren’t washing away the bacteria in your eye. It’s one of the more severe signs of an eye infection and may require surgery, but your doctor can usually treat it with antibiotics.Symptoms in One EyeAlthough many of these signs overlap with other conditions, particularly allergies, one characteristic in particular indicates it’s an eye infection. If these symptoms occur in both eyes, it’s most likely an allergy. However, if these symptoms only appear in one eye, they’re probably the result of an infection.Other typical symptoms of an eye infection may involve eye pain, eye discomfort and swelling around your eye. It’s vital to know the signs and symptoms of an eye infection so you avoid mistaking an infection for allergies or another condition. If you think you have an eye infection, seek medical attention and get treatment early before your symptoms worsen.Resource Links:“Infectious uveitis: An enigma,” National Library of Medicine“Ocular Emergencies: Red Eye,” National Library of Medicine“Bacterial and Fungal Endophthalmitis,” National Library of Medicine“Common eye infections,” National Library of Medicine“Bacterial profile of ocular infections: a systematic review,” National Library of Medicine“Viral anterior uveitis,” National Library of Medicine MORE FROM SYMPTOMFIND.COM From the Pelgrane Press website: Can you kill the dungeon before it kills you? In 13th Age, living dungeons slither up through the underworld and invade the surface lands. The Stone Thief is the most ancient and cunning of its kind; a vast monster that preys on the cities and structures you love, swallows them, and remakes them into more deathtrap-filled levels inside itself. Now, it’s hunting YOU. For players: + Embark on a saga of madness, revenge and giant monsters + Aid or thwart the schemes of the Icons as they battle for control of the dungeon + Slay, loot and survive deep in the bowels of the earth + Destroy this age-old threat forever For GMs: + A monstrous campaign covering the entire Champion tier (4th to 8th level) + Thirteen levels of peril from the dungeon’s opening Maw to the orc hordes of the Deep Keep, the terrors of the Pit of Undigested Ages, and the nightmare city beyond the Onyx Catacombs + New monsters, new treasures, new traps, and new factions for your 13th Age campaign The Stone Thief rises. Enter it, find its secrets and defeat it – or die trying. The massive living dungeon known as the Stone Thief is so epic it cannot be confined to just one system! Designer Gareth Ryder-Hanrahan has turned the first two levels of his megadungeon masterpiece into a PDF that’s compatible with the 5th Edition of the world’s most popular roleplaying game. Eyes of the Stone Thief (5E Compatible) is a two-level dungeon like your players have never seen before: a living creature of stone that rises to the surface, devours structures and places, then incorporates them into itself as dungeon levels. The Stone Thief is a cunning foe that seeks to destroy those who dare set foot inside... The 39-page adventure brings nearly 30 new monsters to your 5E table, including the hobgoblin warmage, filth hydra, undead spider, and ghoul fleshripper. Run the adventure as-is, plunder it for ideas and inspiration, or use it as a starting point to convert the rest of the Eyes of the Stone Thief campaign to 5th Edition. The Stone Thief rises. Enter it, find its secrets and defeat it – or die trying. These may be minor conditions that clear up on their own or serious conditions that lead to permanent loss of sight. They also come with a host of varying symptoms. Learn more about these common eye disease symptoms and treatments.CataractsCataracts are a degenerative eye disease most commonly found in people over the age of 65. Cataracts tend to be a natural part of the aging process for many people, though it is also associated with diabetes and is more likely to affect people who have family members who also have cataracts. Symptoms include cloudy vision, double vision, trouble seeing at night and a cloudy film over the lens. Eyeglasses and magnifying glasses help treat the symptoms, but the only effective treatment for cataracts is surgery to replace the lens with an artificial one, according to Optegra Eye Health Care.Diabetic RetinopathyDiabetic retinopathy or diabetic eye disease is a condition that affects people who’ve been diagnosed with diabetes. It occurs when there’s damage to the blood vessels in the back of the eye. It develops due to uncontrolled blood sugar and worsens if patients do not maintain healthy blood sugar levels. Symptoms include blurred vision, floaters, poor color vision and empty areas in your vision. Left untreated, diabetic retinopathy can lead to vision loss. Treatments include monitoring by an eye doctor for mild cases and surgery for more advanced cases.GlaucomaGlaucoma is a group of eye conditions that affect the optic nerve. Conditions that increase intraocular pressure cause damage to the optic nerve and can lead to vision loss. In the early stages, glaucoma may not have any signs or symptoms. When symptoms do appear, they include blurred vision, lessened peripheral vision, headaches, pain in the eyes and vomiting. Unfortunately, there is no cure for glaucoma. You can slow the progression of the disease with early detection and treatment, notes Vision Source.Macular DegenerationMacular degeneration is another eye disease that commonly affects people as they age. The two types of macular degeneration are referred to as wet and dry. Dry is the most common. Both develop due to waste deposits building up under the retina that stop essential nutrients from reaching the eyes. Symptoms include blurred vision, color distortion and eventual loss of vision. There are no effective ways to reverse damage from macular degeneration, according to Vision Source.ConjunctivitisConjunctivitis is one of the most common eye diseases affecting people of all ages. It’s better known as pink eye — a highly contagious condition often found in children. It occurs when bacteria or viruses get into the eye and cause inflammation and infection. Symptoms include pinkness or redness in the white of the eye and increased tearing or discharge. Conjunctivitis doesn’t always need medical treatment. Depending on the cause, treatment may include warm compresses, lubricating eye drops or medicated eye drops. MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET
